Psychological thriller, THE MEMORY BOX, cautions: Google yourself at your own risk

“What would you do if you Googled yourself and discovered something shocking?”

Westfield, New Jersey/July 2014 -- THE MEMORY BOX, award winning debut novel of author Eva Lesko Natiello about a woman who Google's herself and discovers the shocking details of a past she doesn't remember is available now in paperback, e-book and audiobook.

In this gripping ripped-from-the-headlines thriller, privileged suburban moms amuse themselves by Googling everyone in town, digging up dirt to fuel thorny gossip. Caroline Thompson, devoted mother of two, sticks to the moral high ground and attempts to avoid them. She's relieved to hear that her name appears only twice, citing her philanthropy. A delayed pang of insecurity prods Caroline to Google her maiden name—which none of the others know. The hits cascade like a tsunami. Caroline's terrified by what she reads. An obituary for her sister, JD. With every click, the revelations grow more alarming. Caroline is hurled into a state of paranoia—upending her blissful family life—desperate to prove these allegations false before someone discovers they're true.

“A New York Times article I read about a California teenager who Googled himself and discovered he was on a missing persons list in Canada, was the impetus for THE MEMORY BOX,” explains author Natiello. “He didn't know he was a victim of parental abduction,” she adds. “I was fascinated with the possibility you may not know everything about yourself.”

THE MEMORY BOX is the newest release from the hottest genre today—the marriage thriller—described as “psychological page-turners that subvert the happily-ever-after formula of classic chic lit—hence their other moniker, “chic noir”—turning the mundanity of the domestic sphere into a hotbed of betrayal, secrets, and lies.” (Lucy Scholes of The Daily Beast)

“I especially love this genre of thrillers because they hit closest to home, both literally and figuratively, and are the most unsettling because of that. THE MEMORY BOX, like the other thrillers in this genre, like The Girl On The Train by Paula Hawkins, Gone Girl by Gillian Flynn, The Husband’s Secret by Liane Moriarty and The Silent Wife by A.S.A. Harrison, exposes the age-old fear of “how well do you know your spouse?” at a time when everything is seemingly knowable.

THE MEMORY BOX is a Houston Writers Guild 2014 Manuscript award recipient.
